5 Weird Things Found on Flat Roofs (And Why You Should Check Yours)

City living is full of surprises, and most of them end up on your roof, which is something Discounted Roofing LLC deals with all the time. A flat roof is basically a giant shelf for the neighborhood. It catches everything: frisbees, takeout containers, and unidentifiable plastic objects. While it might be fun to act like an archaeologist of urban debris, leaving that junk up there is a recipe for disaster. If you haven't been up to the roof deck lately, you might be hosting a garbage party that is destroying your home. Here are five reasons you need to go up there and clean house.

First, the "Science Experiment." When leaves and water mix in a clogged drain, they create a sludge that smells terrible and blocks water perfectly. If you are searching for Flat Roof Companies Near Me, it's probably because your roof has turned into a swamp. Keep the drains clear unless you want to breed mosquitoes. Second, the "Lost Toys." We have found balls, drones, and toy cars clogging scuppers. It's all fun and games until a tennis ball floods your living room.

Third, the "Tree Surprise." We have seen actual saplings growing out of the dirt accumulated in roof corners. If you have a tree growing on your roof, you have a problem. Roots eat roofs. Pull the weeds before your house becomes a forest. Fourth, the "Fireworks Aftermath." After every holiday, flat roofs are littered with cardboard tubes and debris. Wet cardboard is heavy and gross. Sweep it off before it turns into papier-mâché mush on your silver coating.

Fifth, the "Alligator Skin." If your roof looks like a reptilian handbag, it's not a fashion statement; it's sun damage. That cracked, dry look means your coating is dead. You need to slap some fresh silver on there before the cracks turn into leaks.

So, grab a broom and take a look. Your roof shouldn't be a lost and found bin. Keep it clean, keep it sealed, and keep the water out.
